

ABOUT CTO

Conversation with Katie Worst | Nurse Practitioner

[Point of view, nurse practitioner, Katie Worst]

[Katie Worst, Nurse Practitioner, Washington D.C., USA]

My name is Katherine Worst. I'm a nurse practitioner at Children's National in Washington DC, and I'm also a nurse practitioner with the CTO program. CTO means a lot to me because it's an opportunity for me to take care of children on a much bigger, global scale. We get to use our skills to travel to different places around the world and take care of children who may not necessarily have access to the care that we know how to provide on a daily basis. And more than that, we're able to teach the team in that country or location wherever we travel to, so that they can be better providers for the patients that they're taking care of, and it's an inspiring mission or accomplishment to see providers who are so happy and interested to learn how to be better. And then we constantly also learn things from them. So, it's a really great collaboration between teams and across a lot of different people and different professions, and it's an amazing opportunity to be a part of.