[Pediatric surgeon, Jonathan Sutcliffe, about the CTO mission in Georgia]

[Jonathan Sutcliffe, Pediatric Surgeon, Leeds, United Kingdom]

My name is Jonathan Sutcliffe. I'm a consultant pediatric surgeon in Leeds, which is in the north of England, in the UK [United Kingdom]. The reason why we come to work, of course, is to try and improve outcomes for children with colorectal problems, and to try and help them and their families. Doing this for patients that we're responsible for at home is obviously very important. But having the opportunity to contribute to a team that tries to help children in other settings that are less easily able to access some of the skill sets the team provides, is a great privilege. It's been absolutely fantastic meeting the local teams, meeting the parents, and of course meeting the children. I really hope we've been able to improve the outcomes for at least a few patients in the last few days. I also hope that we'll be able to contribute to the local teams being able to take care of patients well in the future. And now from a personal perspective, it's been phenomenal rubbing shoulders with the doctors and nurses and the volunteers that have got amazing skill sets. I've learned a great deal, and I really hope that allows me to improve the care that I provide to patients when I go back to my own center. Thanks again. Goodbye.
